Three cars of a freight train were derailed yesterday morning at one of the switches at the north end of the Central Vermont yard at Northfield. They traveled on the frozen ground a distance of several rods, and when in front of the station pitched sideways in such a manner that the front trucks of one car went into position on the rails of the first track west of the main line. They were placed back on the rails by the wrecking train, which arrived early in the morning. Traffic was not delayed as trains were enabled to pass on the sidetrack.
